

General Leads Relief Column To Rescue Trapped Yanks

Editor's Note: Here is a dramatic story vividly describing how Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, commander of the U.S. 24th Infantry Division, personally led a relief column of his troops to rescue an American unit trapped by an enemy double roadblock. Tom Carson, a U. S. Marine Corps warrant officer during World War II and now an International Newsphotos staff cameraman, accompanied the relief column. In his dispatch he tells how General Dean narrowly escaped death when an enemy sniper pumped three bullets at him.

KUM RIVER FRONT, Korea, July 17—Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, heroic commander of the 24th Infantry Division, personally led a makeshift relief column of his division Sunday to the Kum river front to smash an enemy double roadblock and rescue an American regiment trapped behind it.

And at noon today, General Dean's veterans of the 24th are still stalling the enemy despite his overwhelming numbers, and are holding the line four miles northeast of Taejon.

Dean led the relief column to within two miles of the Kum river and one mile of the front firing line to smash the roadblock.

The colonel commanding the regiment, which led the way through the major roadblock, hopped along holding his wounded leg off the ground. He hopped through blazing American trucks which the invading Reds had piled on the road and fired to prevent an American withdrawal.

Dean conferred with the colonel at Taejon this morning and announced that the Reds had made a banzai charge that cut off the American unit which "killed them in heaps."

The wounded colonel's unit was ordered to withdraw when several thousand Reds started to drive a wedge into the 19th Regiment's left flank.

The Taejon airstrip was abandoned Sunday evening, Lt. Thad Farris of Waco, Tex., taking the last observation plane off the strip. His observer, Sgt. Chester Getty, of Missouri spotted a large concentration of Reds with heavy tanks near Nonsan.

As he personally led the counter-attack which smashed the enemy roadblock, Dean declared he was extremely proud of his 24th Division men.

"They won us lots of time," the general declared in a voice filled with understand a bit pride.

Dean's 24th Division troops are battle-tested veterans now and they are gaining a defiant attitude.

This attitude is reflected in the signs they are chalking on the buildings of evacuated towns, such as "Tell Uncle Joe To ——" and "Gone To Get Some Hot Chow; Will Be Back."

In a jeep, Dean led the relief column to help the 19th Regiment which was cut off for ten hours behind a double roadblock.

The column included two tanks, four half-tracks with 50 caliber machineguns, four jeeps with heavy machineguns and a truck with less than a platoon of infantrymen.

Dean's jeep led the way to within a mile of the southern roadblock. Heavy machinegun fire from the hills on both flanks forced him to halt and send the two tanks ahead.

Lt. Roland Richmond of Ft. Riley, Kans., commanded the lead tank, and Sgt. J. W. Athey of Dallas, Tex., the other.

Dean ordered Richmond and Athey to clear the roadblocks and rescue the trapped Americans.

Richmond said that the southernmost roadblock consisted of only one burning vehicle, but the major roadblock to the north had seven or eight burning American trucks, plus several other vehicles piled onto the road. Red machineguns fired constantly from a thousand yards, peppering the major roadblock.

American machineguns began to answer the enemy while the tanks tried to break the block. Six times the tanks

Hoarders Getting Fooled; No Rationing Expected

WASHINGTON, July 17—Hoarding of tires, sugar and other goods is viewed by high administration officials today as a "temporary flurry" which does not call for consumer rationing or price ceilings.

These officials said the panic buying that has occurred during the Korean war crisis is not widespread, is confined to a limited number of articles and should be short-lived.

They said there is no reason for hoarding because an ample supply exists of practically everything consumers want, and that when the public discovers this the "flurry" will subside.

Meanwhile, reports are current of a "gray market" in automobiles with new cars selling for $300 above list prices and corresponding premiums on used cars.

In sharp contrast to this development is a reported drop in the price of scrap steel ranging from $40 to $29 per ton.

THE SCRAP supply is said to be increasing as a result of greater recovery of scrap through improved processes. More scrap is flowing to market from dismantling old structures as construction booms.

Officials taking part in administration policy discussions predicted that President Truman will ask Congress for legislation authorizing him to allocate steel and some other commodities among industrial users, but will not request extensive controls now.

They said the trend of administration thinking is in this direction rather than toward a recommendation for sweeping rationing, price, wage and manpower curbs.

ARMY CHIEFS SAY SITUATION NOT BAD

TOKYO, July 18—(Tuesday)—Massed Communist troops were storming the gates of Taejon early today after forcing outnumbered American defenders into new orderly retreats to the outskirts of the key South Korean city where the U. S. Army abandoned its field headquarters.

Artillery-supported thousands of fanatically attacking Red troops and guerrillas closed in on the former South Korean provisional capital which was "virtually empty," according to a front dispatch from International Newsphotos Cameraman Tom Carson.

"In what was once American headquarters," Carson related just after leaving Taejon Monday night, "a fat rat nibbled at an open can of hamburgers and papers fluttered in the corridors."

In Washington, the U. S. Army pledged today to hold a position in Central Korea even though the former provisional capital of Taejon may be lost.

An Army spokesman said "we are getting stronger all the time, and the Communists are getting weaker. It is just a question of time until we start rolling back the other way."

The spokesman pointed out that the rate of Communist advance is now much slower than it was when American forces entered the fray at the town and airport of Suwon, south of Seoul.

He said:

"THERE IS AN excellent defensive mountain ridge 35 miles east of Taejon, and another ridge 40 to 50 miles from Taejon. I can't say exactly where we will hold, but we are going to hold a line somewhere in this area."

"If we can hold Taejon, that will be fine, but its loss would not be anything approaching a catastrophe."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced in his latest communique that "heavy pressure, combined with the infiltration tactics" of two or possibly three North Korean divisions "have forced American troops in the Kongju-Taejon - Nonsan triangle to withdraw to new positions."

House Set To Take Ballot To Kill Electoral College

WASHINGTON, July 17—The House votes today on whether to change the 161-year-old method of electing a President of the United States.

The Senate has approved the change, but the House may turn thumbs down on the proposal, sponsored by Sen. Lodge, (R) Mass., and Rep. Gossett, (D) Tex.

At issue is a proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the electoral college and divide the electoral vote of each state among presidential candidates in proportion to the percentage of popular vote each receives.

Under existing procedure, the candidate who obtains the largest popular vote in a given state receives the entire electoral vote for that state.

Under the Lodge-Gossett proposal, if one candidate received 60 percent of the popular votes in a state he would be credited

92 Head Sheep Reported Taken From 2 Farms

Two Pickaway County farmers Monday notified authorities that 92 head of sheep valued at more than $1,700 have been stolen from their farms.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff said the reports of theft were made by Ray Hardin of near Pherson and Fred Call Jr. of Monroe Township. The farms are less than five miles apart.

Hardin told the sheriff that someone has stolen 15 ewes and 28 lambs from his farm since last week. He estimated the value of the flock at more than $1,000.

Call reported that he has lost 49 head from his farm within the week, 17 ewes and 32 lambs, estimating their value at more than $750.

The sheriff said he investigated the scenes of the reported thefts Monday but that he was unable to pick up any clues.

Call said he noticed something out of line last Wednesday when a piece of wire from the gate leading into the field where the flock was grazing was missing.

$25,000 Continuous Probe Set To Keep Eye On Defense Effort

WASHINGTON, July 17—The Senate Armed Services Committee voted unanimously today to launch a $25,000 "continuous" investigation of the nation's defense effort and all related activities.

Chairman Tydings, (D) Md., announced that the inquiry will be similar to the Truman investigating committee of World War II.

The probe was voted at a closed session at which Sen. Johnson, (D) Tex., pointed out it has been necessary in previous conflicts to have a close surveillance of military operations by congressional committees.

Tydings said that the new investigating subcommittee will aim at preventing "bottle necks, confusion and other troubles" in the defense effort.

The chairman said that "we want to obtain the fullest measure of support of every character for the war effort."

The resolution calling for the inquiry, introduced by Johnson, charges the subcommittee with: "Constant and continuous watchfulness over all policies, programs, activities, operations, facilities and requirements of the Defense Department, the armed services and other agencies exercising functions relating to defense."

Tydings said the Senate has already approved a $25,000 fund for the full committee and this will be given to the investigating unit.

The chairman said he will appoint members of the subcommittee in a day or two.

Johnson told newsmen he thought the establishment of the investigating unit would help the committee to conserve time of military leaders handling the Korean war and still make it possible for the Armed Services Committee to keep abreast of international developments.

WASHINGTON, July 17—Salary and dividend checks are expected today to feel the brunt of the shock if and when Congress votes new taxes to pay for the Korean war.

And in case the conflict spreads to other parts of the globe, legislators probably will place an excess profits levy on industry.

Some congressional leaders are looking beyond the hard-knock lessons handed the U. S. in Korea and are thinking of overhauling the entire American defense machinery. Such a step would make new taxes almost mandatory.

But Senate Finance Chairman George (D) Ga., believes that no action should be taken until Fall, and preferably not until next January when both the lessons and the cost of them can be reckoned. George said:

"Obviously, any new taxes are going to fall on incomes—individual and corporate—because that's where the money is."

"But, if it becomes necessary to write a new tax bill, we should eliminate some of the inequities in the tax structure so that we can build on a more solid base. We should put our house in order and strengthen ourselves to meet any new emergencies."

Proposals of this kind are regarded as definitely out as matters stand, although they undoubtedly will be included in any plan for full mobilization if this step becomes necessary.

The President intends to discuss the control problem and submit recommendations in his mid-year economic report ready in the next two weeks.

This report has been delayed because administration economists have had to reappraise needs in the light of the Korean war.

Under consideration are proposals for renewed curbs on installment buying, limited inventory controls on metals and some other things, and restrictions on manufacturing of certain articles such as television sets.

Officials added, however, that the President may ask for nothing more at the present time than power to allocate materials needed for a stepped-up program of military production.

A RISE IN TAKE-HOME pay for a great many workers is anticipated as a result of this program, which some administration leaders expect to cost $10 billion within the next few months.

The result is that proposals are under consideration for si-phonning off some of this additional purchasing power. Higher taxes and an increase in Treasury sales of savings bonds have been suggested.

An intensified effort to sell savings bonds is regarded as the only thing immediately in prospect. Officials said that if higher taxes are recommended it probably will not be before the new Congress meets next January.

Monday, EST) said the new defense lines, from which two heroic U. S. Army regiments were waging a bitter rearguard struggle, lie "in the general vicinity north and west of Taejon."

Kongju, where the invaders first captured a bridgehead on the south bank of the Kum river bend, is 18 airline miles northwest of Taejon. Nonsan, where a Communist column outflanked the Americans on the west, lies 22 miles southwest of the hotly beleaguered city.

The attacking Communists had compelled the U. S. 24th Division's 34th and 19th Regiments to retreat some six miles Sunday night prior to the new withdrawal announced early Tuesday by MacArthur. The supreme commander declared in his newest communique:

"Heavily supported by artillery but with little tank support, the invaders in this area are continuing to pay a high price for ground gained."

MacArthur said "only two" Russian-made North Korean tanks succeeded in crossing to the south side of the Kum river bend since the Reds shattered that river defense line, "and these have been destroyed."

"Withdrawals in this triangle continue to be orderly," the supreme commander announced.

He said "heavy Red concentrations" were observed in the vicinity of the junction city of Chochiwon, just north of the Kum and 20 miles above Taejon. These enemy forces apparently were being rushed down to reinforce the assault on Taejon.

OVER CHONGJU, just east of Chochiwon, MacArthur revealed, a number of new-type Communist jet fighter planes were reported sighted in action. These were described as "smaller than the American F-80, with swept-back wings, stubby fuselages and blunt noses."

The supreme commander said the road hub of Yongju, 74 miles northeast of Taejon, was "reported in enemy hands as of" Sunday midnight.

He said the North Korean 2nd division in that vicinity was "apparently trying to turn the north flank of the U. S. forces in the Taejon area." Yongju is 58 miles north-northeast of the big junction of Taejon on the double-tracked railroad from the entry port of Pusan to embattled Taejon.

MacArthur announced that Communist forces on South Korea's east coast were "reported in retreat after the reversals suffered at the hands of South Koreans" near Kiemdang, north of Yongdok, which is 90 air miles above Pusan.

By Monday noon—before the new withdrawals announced early Tuesday by MacArthur—the U. S. 19th Regiment was reported in field dispatches fighting within only four miles northeast of Taejon after giving up the city's airfield to the enemy hordes. Two transport planes rushed seriously wounded American soldiers from the airstrip just before it was abandoned.

charged, but could not break through the burning barrier. Concussion grenades shook the tanks, but did not stop them. Richmond said that Communists in villages threw the grenades.

Then, wounded men from the trapped unit staggered and crawled around the roadblock.

Dean's four half-tracks were knocked out, so the wounded were loaded aboard the two tanks to be taken back to safety.

The two tanks made several trips to carry out about fifty men from the trapped unit.

The wounded regimental colonel still had one operating tank. Holding his bloodstained and bandaged leg off the ground, the colonel directed the tank through the roadblock's weakest point.

Then, hopping after it, he led what was left of his outfit back down the road to Taejon.

The withdrawal toward Taejon was filled with heroism.

Ammunition truck drivers, Privates James Cooper of Panama City, and Casimir Scott of Michigan, had their trucks shot out from under them.

Alone in a rice paddy, they fought against an estimated 400 Reds in the hills. Then they moved back to help surviving machinegunners blast at the advancing enemy.

Scott said there was one man at battery four who escaped enemy guns. The rest of the battery were wounded or killed when an enemy mortar hit their ammunition.

Scott said:

"The wounded were trying to crawl away. The dead were left where they lay."

Snipers filled Taejon Sunday night. One sent three bullets into one place which Dean was looking over to investigate a fire.

Splinters flew around Dean from both sides. Calmly, the general said:

"It's pretty rotten shooting. They should have got me."

Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff said the mishap occurred when an auto driven by Melvin Leasure, 24, of 601 East Mound street collided with a truck operated by Lloyd Davis, 40, of Stoutsville Route 1.

Leasure told the deputy he had been following the truck and had attempted to pass on the right when he thought the vehicle was turning left into a side road.

He said that he swerved to the left when the turn was not made, the right front of his car striking the left rear of the pickup. Both vehicles went into the right-hand ditch. The pickup overturned in the ditch.

Radcliff said the injured were Fred Harron, 43, of Circleville, who suffered a face laceration; John Montgomery, 28, of Circleville, who received a lacerated knee; and Richard Pollock, 24, of Washington C. H., who sustained a shoulder bruise.

Rayburn said the congressional leaders were given a report on the war situation. Asked how it appeared, he replied "the same as it does in the newspapers."

2. Calling up of about 100,000 trained Reserve specialists, both officers and enlisted men.

3. Mobilization of some National Guard divisions to replace regular defense divisions at home.

4. Mobilization and conversion of some key industrial plants to provide modern heavy tanks, artillery, ammunition, planes and countless other weapons needed to cope with the Korean situation.

5. Standby controls for use under executive authority should the Korean war spread into global conflict.

6. Swift reactivation of many elements of the U. S. Fleet that were put in mothballs at the end of World War II as well as thousands of planes and tanks similarly "deactivated."

Yank Units Forced Back By Enemy

Monday, EST) said the new defense lines, from which two heroic U. S. Army regiments were waging a bitter rearguard struggle, lie "in the general vicinity north and west of Taejon."

Kongju, where the invaders first captured a bridgehead on the south bank of the Kum river bend, is 18 airline miles northwest of Taejon. Nonsan, where a Communist column outflanked the Americans on the west, lies 22 miles southwest of the hotly beleaguered city.

The attacking Communists had compelled the U. S. 24th Division's 34th and 19th Regiments to retreat some six miles Sunday night prior to the new withdrawals announced early Tuesday by MacArthur. The supreme commander declared in his newest communique:

"Heavily supported by artillery but with little tank support, the invaders in this area are continuing to pay a high price for ground gained."

MacArthur said "only two" Russian-made North Korean tanks succeeded in crossing to the south side of the Kum river bend since the Reds shattered that river defense line, "and these have been destroyed."

"Withdrawals in this triangle continue to be orderly," the supreme commander announced.

He said "heavy Red concentrations" were observed in the vicinity of the junction city of Chochiwon, just north of the Kum and 20 miles above Taejon. These enemy forces apparently were being rushed down to reinforce the assault on Taejon.

OVER CHONGJU, just east of Chochiwon, MacArthur revealed, a number of new-type Communist jet fighter planes were reported sighted in action. These were described as "smaller than the American F-80, with swept-back wings, stubby fuselages and blunt noses."

The supreme commander said the road hub of Yongju, 74 miles northeast of Taejon, was "reported in enemy hands as of" Sunday midnight.

He said the North Korean 2nd division in that vicinity was "apparently trying to turn the north flank of the U. S. forces in the Taejon area." Yongju is 58 miles north-northeast of the big junction of Taegu on the double-tracked railroad from the entry port of Pusan to embattled Taejon.

MacArthur announced that Communist forces on South Korea's east coast were "reported in retreat after the reversals suffered at the hands of South Koreans" near Kiemdang, north of Yongdok, which is 90 air miles above Pusan.

By Monday noon—before the new withdrawals announced early Tuesday by MacArthur—the U. S. 19th Regiment was reported in field dispatches fighting within only four miles north-east of Taejon after giving up the city's airfield to the enemy hordes. Two transport planes rushed seriously wounded American soldiers from the airstrip just before it was abandoned.

Retail Business Shows Gains Late In June

Pickaway County business during the last week in June was $410.55 better than during the same period in 1949, according to a report of sales tax stamps sold here.

State Treasurer Don Ebright reported that sales during the week ending June 30 totaled $8,398.25, compared to $7,987.70 for the same week last year.

Throughout the state, Ebright reported gross sales of prepaid tax receipts for the week exceeded last year's totals in all classes of industry.

Automotive sales soared to $1,360,004.11. For the same week last year the total was $906,479.90.

Davis reported that he was unable to identify his assailants.

Meanwhile, Wilbur Johnson, 34, of Detroit, reported at 8:15 p. m. Saturday that two men robbed him of $36 and stole his wrist watch on Route 23 north of South Bloomfield.

Sheriff Radcliff said Johnson reported that he was picked up by two men believed to be driving a Ross County car earlier Saturday in Toledo as he was enroute to Parkersburg, W. Va.

The man said he fell asleep in the rear seat of the auto and that the men dragged him from the car, rifled his pockets and stole his watch.

Burglars Enter Church, Lodge

The chief pointed out that both buildings were broken into in the same method. Doors of both buildings were pried open.

Officer Turney Ross scanned both buildings for fingerprints Monday.

3 Men Hurt In Collision On Route 183

Three men suffered minor injuries in an auto-pickup truck crash at 5 p. m. Saturday on Route 183.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff said the mishap occurred when an auto driven by Melvin Leasure, 24, of 601 East Mound street collided with a truck operated by Lloyd Davis, 40, of Stoutsville Route 1.

Leasure told the deputy he had been following the truck and had attempted to pass on the right when he thought the vehicle was turning left into a side road.

He said that he swerved to the left when the turn was not made, the right front of his car striking the left rear of the pickup. Both vehicles went into the right-hand ditch. The pickup overturned in the ditch.

Radcliff said the injured were Fred Harron, 43, of Circleville, who suffered a face laceration; John Montgomery, 28, of Circleville, who received a lacerated knee; and Richard Pollock, 24, of Washington C. H., who sustained a shoulder bruise.

Leasure was fined $10 and costs later in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root for passing without an assured clear distance.

Lima Experts Say William Graham Is Not Insane

William Graham, 23, of Circleville has been found sane by authorities of Lima State Hospital for the Criminally Insane.

Graham was indicted on an arson count by Pickaway County grand jury, was committed to the Lima institution for examination by Common Pleas Judge William D. Radcliff.

It was the questioning of Graham by Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff that led to the apprehension of Robert Seeger, 21, who confessed to setting fires that took 168 lives.

Graham's return to Pickaway County jail is expected soon.

sense of realism in handling all our affairs.

"I believe we will have to raise some more funds to completely revise our existing defense preparations in light of what happened to us in Korea."

Sen. Millikin, Colo., senior Republican on the finance committee, agreed with George that costs must be assessed before "any notion can jell" on new taxes.

Congress is expected to receive from President Truman this week the first request for funds to cover Korean campaign costs. Chairman Thomas, (D) Okla., of the military appropri-tions subcommittee said it will total $1 billion or more.

Many senators, including George, figure the total cost for Korea will be around $8 billion.

George's finance committee has shelved indefinitely a House-passed measure to reduce World War II luxury taxes.

President Plans Talks

will be given right away over all domestic legislation.

ASKED WHETHER he could say anything about the scope of controls the President may request, Lucas declared he was not assuming the President would ask for any controls.

Rayburn said the congressional leaders were given a report on the war situation. Asked how it appeared, he replied "the same as it does in the newspapers."

In the face of further U. S. withdrawals in South Korea, the President is expected to discuss:

1. A request from Congress for five to eight billion dollars to put a well-equipped army of 100,000 men in the field.

2. Calling up of about 100,000 trained Reserve specialists, both officers and enlisted men.

3. Mobilization of some National Guard divisions to replace regular defense divisions at home.

4. Mobilization and conversion of some key industrial plants to provide modern heavy tanks, artillery, ammunition, planes and countless other weapons needed to cope with the Korean situation.

5. Standby controls for use under executive authority should the Korean war spread into global conflict.

6. Swift reactivation of many elements of the U. S. Fleet that were put in mothballs at the end of World War II as well as thousands of planes and tanks similarly "deactivated."

Meanwhile, the Selective Service system prepared to put 100,000 men through physical examinations in the next 10 weeks to fill the Army's request for 20,000 draftees.

Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey declared that if there is general mobilization for war, the armed services will ask for "many more women than ever before."

Fire Damages Haywood Home

An honorary reception committee has been set up to welcome the Cracker Barrel Caravan which will be in Circleville Saturday evening.

On the committee are Pickaway County Common Pleas Judge William Radcliff, Circleville Mayor Thurman I. Miller, Rotary Club President Larry Best, Kiwanis Club President John Heiskell and Joe Bell, president of Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The latter organization is sponsoring the "caravan" which is due to put on a special program in front of Pickaway Courthouse at 8 p. m. Saturday.

The caravan, sent out to boom the Hoover Commission Report for economy in the federal government, will be made up of four vehicles headed by a 30-foot semi-trailer bearing an authentic reproduction of an old-fashioned country store.

Free Passes Out For Biggest Free Show Here

lieve 235,000 attended the 1949 affair.

The Pumpkin Show starts on Wednesday, Oct. 18, runs through Saturday, Oct. 21. And according to information printed on the pass, it is good for all those days—except Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

In case of rain the passes to the big free show will be honored next year. In case a holder of a free pass to the free show loses the Annie Oakley, he can get another just for the asking.

Pumpkin Show officials are hoping they will be flooded with requests for the ducats—especially if they are to be mailed to out-of-town friends, newspapers, radio stations and any other media of advertising the old Roundtown's annual extravaganza.

Korean Civilians Milling Aboard Train Going North

ADVANCE Headquarters in Korea, July 17—Here are the first impressions of a newsman arriving in war-torn Korea:

Our northbound train pulls into a South Korean town—former headquarters of U. S. armed forces in Korea—and the station is crowded with refugees, soldiers, women, kids—everybody.

Nearly all Koreans have a gun of some description—pistols, carbines, old Jap rifles. Most of them have filthy towels draped around their necks to wipe off perspiration.

Between the railroad tracks GIs have a shower operating and shouts are coming from inside. The improvised shower is enclosed by sheet metal. Soldiers emerge wiping their hair or pulling on clean dungarees.

A Korean colonel in dungarees checks and finds the train will not leave until a previous one is known to have reached the next station.

Finally, 50 minutes late and after ceaseless tooting by the engineer, we pull out.

SOME GIs CAME aboard at the last moment with duffle bags and cases of rations. They sit nearby talking of war, fleas, reinforcements and how some American armor-piercing shells bounce off North Korean tanks. Korean children and school girls sit quietly and timidly in the crowded car. Most of the Korean men wear either straw hats or headbands.

As the train moves through the town we see what appears to be a youth corps assembled in a factory yard for military drill with wooden rifles.

Every railroad bridge is guarded by what appears to be volunteers. They also are stationed all along the railway, using makeshift shelters of straw or branches. Occasionally there is one with a tent.

Outside the town we see strings of refugees, some hauling their belongings behind tiny Manchurian ponies, some pulling tents or carrying their belongings on their backs.

At each station these people see the train and rush to get aboard, but there is no room. Railroad men roughly push off men and women alike.

A man in civilian clothes keeps sticking a carbine out of a car window and threatening people trying to get aboard one passageway.

As we pulled into another station, Koreans aboard the train began to applaud all the Americans lined up at the station in a light rain.

The train makes many long stops at each station. Once it pulls off the main line apparently to let higher priority stuff go by.

At one town, when the engineer stops tooting the whistle, we can hear the bells of a pretty little brick church on a green hill near the station.

WHEN WE ARRIVE at our destination we find the same confusion as at advance echelon headquarters.

Refugees scramble to get aboard. Korean kids and women are hawking unappetizing-looking food. A platoon of Korean soldiers is lined up and being briefed by officers.

A Korean civilian lies on a stained mattress near the track. He looks more sick than injured.

Five or six puffing Koreans come noisily through the station pushing a small cart. Behind them is a GI loaded down with duffle on a fresh pinewood box.

Written on top of the box is "Corporal —"

Elinor Williams'

Teen Tips

"I am having an informal party soon," writes a high school girl, "and I would like to know what the correct thing is in receiving guests. My parents are going to chaperone. Should I introduce them to each couple as they arrive? Should I thank everyone for coming as I mingle with the guests? There are 30 couples coming and it's a birthday party. I'll be 16."

Ans.—At a small party, you would open the front door for your guests yourself. But at a party of this size it would be nice to ask one of your close relatives to do duty at the front door, admitting guests and showing them to the rooms where they'll leave their coats.

Then you and your parents can stand inside the door of the main room where the guests will gather. As the guests enter the room, you greet them first, then introduce them immediately to your mother and father. Don't wait until the party has started to do this. Your parents could remain with your guests as the party begins and when refreshments are served, but if all your guests are girls and boys of your own age, your parents need not stay in the room during the entire evening.

Never thank guests for coming to your party. Simply tell them how glad you are that they could come. They, in turn, will thank you for a grand time, for a pleasant evening or merely, "Thanks! It was lots of fun. Happy 16th birthday to you!"

"Please tell me what to do," pleads another teenager. "I am 13 and the boy I like is angry because I've refused to go so many places with him. I refused because I'm not allowed to have dates yet, but he doesn't know that."

Ans.—Explain to him immediately that you'd love to go, but aren't allowed to have dates yet. Tell him that there ARE things you can do, however—you could plan a Saturday picnic, bowl, play tennis or get together

Baptists Plan Faith Parade

CLEVELAND, July 17—Some 20,000 persons are scheduled to participate in the Parade of Faith and Freedom which will open the eighth Baptist World Congress here Saturday.

The congress is sponsored by the Baptist World Alliance, a federated body representing 18 million Baptists throughout the world.

About 140 Greater Cleveland churches will take part in the parade. Other participants will include some 1,000 persons from Youngstown, 4,000 from Akron, at your home and the home of friends. You don't have to lose his friendship simply because you're not allowed dates yet.

COLOR BY RADIO

FEW NEW developments for general consumer consumption have been so long and widely anticipated as color television, which has been the subject of much discussion and numerous newspaper and magazine articles long before being brought to marketable form, while large areas of the nation still wait for black-and-white television service. This must make television engineers tremble a little. What will the public expect after all this preliminary fuss? Will viewers be disappointed because the actual color picture may differ from their expectations, or will they accept it as eagerly as they took to television itself?

The long period of Federal Communications Commission consideration of claims and counter-claims of manufacturers for their different systems has seemed to approach melodrama, on the order of the soap-opera so familiar to radio listeners. But if in the end a dependable single system is found future television enthusiasts may be grateful for the long delay now. If each manufacturer proceeded to put his own system on the market, the result in color television would be something like that in the field of recorded music, which finds three types of records and record players on the market. In the case of records it has not worked out too badly; the record collectors have had a chance to try the three kinds and make their own choice, and gradually the relative popularity of the three is becoming evident. But the cost of doing the same thing with color television would be so great that the final result might be no color at all for most set owners.

If the effect of the advent of color in television is a heightening of enjoyment equivalent to that brought to motion pictures by color, public judgment probably will be that it was worth waiting for.

100 YEARS OF LIFE

ATTENTION To the day when a life span of a hundred years may be nothing unusual is the goal of a group of scientists of fourteen nations who have formed the International Association of the Gerontological Societies. The life span is lengthening in many parts of the world, and the expectation of a century of life, instead of the long traditional three score years and ten, may come soon.

But the later years of life still are not good ones. The diseases and deterioration which used to kill as age approached now often only disable, so that the years added to life are frequently years of invalidism. The new association is interested not merely in lengthening the life span, but in making normal health and activity last further into old age. It will have many good wishes.

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a fine, cool morning and soon outside to view the growing things. All in fine state except the roses that Happy, the horse, one evening decided had been planted to provide him with dessert. Ate more than thirty buds and blossoms off a Crimson Glory, and topped them off with generous portions of the Graus Achen and Rosenell bushes. Should have been named Ferdinand, after the bull. Loves any kind of flowers, but as tid bits, and not for their beauty. Up he came to greet me and received his usual morning petting.

Downtown to find all as usual except at the plant where the Sheas were missing due to death of their mother. Knew her for 16 years and found her a delightfully interesting person, a kind friend and with great wisdom gained in not far from a century of living. May her reward be great in the new world to which she has gone.

About the ville to hear more tales of hoarding. And some of the silliest purchases. For instance, the action of one man in buying two additional sets of tires for a car that already has practically new rubber. Wonder where he thinks he will get the gas to run his car and wear out those tires if we do have war? Great runs on sugar and coffee. Terrific demands for cars and farm implements. Some excuse for the farmers.

Chatted with John Hummel, just back from a brief vacation along Lake Erie. Fishing fair to middling and the weather wonderful. But no more comfortable than right here. And Vaden Couch who this week completed an auto tour of more than 6,000 to California and back. Thinks it a great state and would like to go back again sometime, but says never again until after the desert is irrigated. Most folk are frightened by the mountain roads, but the flats are spooky to the mill man.

Os Myers told me about his wheat running about 20 bushels to the acre which seems to be about the average hereabouts this year. Some black rust and a little smut in scattered spots, but nothing serious yet. Corn never looked better from the roadway.

There goes Nat Lefko, who has taken over management of the Rothman store and is happy over business prospects. Doing a good job. And here comes Don Henkle, the five and dime man, who is just beginning to get back into stride after his vacation.

Started to the courthouse to visit the sheriff, but decided he probably could not hear me anyway over the noise of trucks with illegal mufflers, so did change to hunt for a councilman who was to be asked how much longer we have to put up with the blatant Pennsylvania railroad diesel horn. In some cities where there has been official recognition of the diesel horn nuisance the railroads have replaced them with chime whistles. Probably no quieter, but at least pleasant listening.

George E. Sokolsky's These Days

The United States has never been an aggressor. If anything, this country's weakness has been what the Freudians call an inferiority complex. We always have looked elsewhere for greater wisdom, greater knowledge, greater perfections. Some years ago, it was fashionable, in certain circles, to accept the Swedish modification of capitalism as so wonderful as to be worthy of our imitation. Yet, one had to ask: What has Sweden got that we do not have?

So, after the last war, our intellectuals became active to re-stimulate the culture of the dying nations of Europe. It was American enthusiasm and financing that produced UNESCO as a world-wide revival of the varying cultures of man that had suffered devastation of war. A UNESCO description of culture appears in an interesting study of the entire subject issued by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace:

"Into the making of a culture go many factors—climate, natural resources, language, tradition, education, commerce, government, etc. Geographical barriers may help one people to develop in peace through long periods of time; an exposed geographic position may tend to make a people warlike, either in their own defense or in conquest of their neighbors. Possession of metal and sources of power may lead one people to industry, while fertile soil leads another to agriculture, and good harbors on the sea may lead a third to commerce."

Then they say something that is more in the nature of the totalitarians:

"Good government and great leaders may provide one people with a heritage of order and justice, while tyrants and a different tradition in government lead another to internal antagonisms and political instability. Men of genius find varying forms of expression, and fulfill their genius variously in different periods and among different cultural contexts."

We do not, in this country, worry too much about men of genius. They come and go. In fact, very few who function in government fail to believe that each is at least a great leader and probably a genius. Few men who have sat in the White House have ever assumed that truly it is the whole people and not the individual in office that accomplishes all the wonders that we behold. The "great man" theory of life which gave us such bad dictators as Hitler and Mussolini, has also given us Stalin, who is worshipped in his own country and its satellites as the greatest genius that ever lived.

The other day, I visited Association Island in Lake Ontario to attend a camp of General Electric executives and what impressed me most was the total absence of the "great man" theory. Charles E. Wilson, the president of General Electric, was there, but so were about 300 others. And there was no rank of any kind. I could not help recalling how I have seen, in other countries, men rise when the top man entered a dining hall; how they practically stood at attention; how they bowed deferentially as they approached the genius. Americans take all that in their stride. The top man is just another specialized worker.

Injections Found Helpful in Treating Hypertension Cases

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

HYPERTENSION, or high blood pressure, is one of the most pressing problems confronting medical science because of the large number of complications which may result from it, such as damage to the heart, blood vessels, and kidneys.

It would appear, according to an article written by Dr. James H. Hutton of Chicago, in the Medical Times, that, in some cases of high blood pressure, disturbances of the glands of internal secretion, namely, the endocrine glands, particularly the pituitary gland at the base of the brain and the adrenal gland located just above the kidney, may be a factor in the disorder.

Exact Method

Unfortunately, however, there does not as yet seem to be any exact method of telling in just which cases endocrine gland disturbances are a factor. Nevertheless, about 3 out of every 100 patients treated were helped by giving them injections of extracts from the pituitary gland and small doses of thyroid extract. The exact amount of thyroid extract to be used was determined by noting the patient's response to treatment.

The pituitary extract was given twice weekly by injection under the skin.

These patients were also put on a reducing diet, and all of them lost weight. However, it was not believed that the relief of symptoms and reduction in blood pressure came from the weight loss. After treatment was stopped, there was a slow gain in weight, but the blood pressure rose much more slowly.

In these patients it was thought that the high blood pressure was due to improper action of the pituitary and the adrenal glands.

Therefore, they were all treated by giving them small doses of X-ray over these gland regions. About three to seven days after the first treatment, if the patient's symptoms improved and there was a marked drop in blood pressure, no further treatment was given until the blood pressure again began to rise.

First Treatment

If the blood pressure did not drop and the symptoms improved after the first treatment, additional treatments, up to six, were given at weekly intervals, unless a drop in the blood pressure and improvements in the symptoms occurred sooner.

The effect of the treatment lasts for a variable period of time in different patients. If, after an interval of time, the blood pressure should again rise, further treatments may be again administered. In more than 200 patients who had three or more such courses of treatment, symptoms were relieved and blood pressure reduced.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
M. V.: I am thirty-five years old. For the past year I have noticed bruise marks appear on my legs. What is the cause and is it dangerous?

Answer: It is possible that you have what is known as purpura. In this condition, the patient has bleeding into the skin which is shown by spots that vary in size from a pinhead to that of a coin. In some cases the cause cannot be found. The condition may be serious.

You should have a careful examination by your physician, including a complete examination of the blood so that the clotting time, bleeding time and the blood platelets, which help in clotting of the blood, may be determined.

VARYING YOUR SIGNALS

PRACTICALLY every bridge player—surely every one appreciably past the beginner stage—knows the difference between an "encouraging" and a "discouraging" card played to an opening lead from across the table. The former is any card readable as probably higher than the player's lowest, and the latter is one which looks to the leader like the lowest. So, if you want a second lead of the same suit, but not a third, while holding four cards, you should play the second or third card of the suit first and then, on the second lead, put the next higher card.

East managed to read, from the fact that South made that jump bid of two levels more than necessary, that the declarer almost surely had nothing but a considerable heart suit. Such being the case, West was marked for any unseen high-card strength. Since West, however, had passed on his first turn instead of opening the bidding, he most likely had only a four-card diamond suit. That being the case, East counted South for two diamonds.

So far, so good. But then East, desiring that his side score two diamond tricks, used the 3 for an encouraging card. Still all right. But when West obeyed by leading the A to the second trick, East carefully put on the 4. That was a costly error. West thereupon did the only thing he could after seeing the high-low, led a third diamond. South ruffed, cleared trumps in two rounds and on the clubs discarded his spades to make the contract plus an extra trick.

The 8 on the first trick was all right, but East should have played the 10 on the second. The low-high would have been virtually an irrevocable order to switch. The barest glance at the dummy would have called for a spade lead, which would have produced three tricks in the suit and beaten the contract two.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

THE TWO of them sat down at the table, and Marybelle passed food to Ives, and she smiled at him then, her smile roguish. She said, "Wouldn't you like it this way every morning?"

He frowned. "I don't want to keep coming to table wearing a gun."

She nodded. "I see what you mean. We talked that out last night, didn't we?" She ate in silence, and after she'd poured coffee she said, "Did you have trouble at Hammer?"

"No one was there but Tana. She fixed the sack for us."

Marybelle pursed her lips. "She knows about Cory being up here? And me?"

Ives nodded. "That was foolish, Doc." Marybelle said, a trace of anger in her voice. "We'll have Hammer upon us before the day's over."

"You don't know Tana."

"I know women," she countered. "You think a secret's safe with her because you think you've made an appeal to her sentiments. It's you men who are the sentimental ones. A woman will weigh any knowledge for exactly what it's worth. Your Tana's Colonel Carradine's granddaughter, isn't she? She'll see that this chance is too good for the colonel to pass up."

Ives felt the heat grow in him. "Do you think she wants Cory's blood on her hands?"

Marybelle made a face. "She'll talk herself out of that. She'll have herself believing it's for the best. A woman can turn black into white faster than any man could think of doing it."

He put down his coffee cup. "Look," he said, "we've got grub, and we've new dressing for Cory's arm. And we can thank Tana for it."

"Doc," Marybelle said, "we're quarreling."

She came around the table and stood by him. She lifted a hand to his forehead and brushed away a lock of his hair. She said, "Maybe you're right. I hope you are. She means something to you, doesn't she?"

He said, "I was raised on Hammer."

Cory Lund said, "What is this?"

His eyes were open; his voice was sneering. He lay there in the bunk looking wrong out.

Ives nodded toward him. "Better feed him."

Marybelle moved to prepare a plate. She took it to Cory and lifted a spoon, and Cory said, "Hey, I've got one wing."

He kept his thoughts to himself as he examined the wound. It was doing as well as he'd hoped, but some part of his judgment he reserved, even from himself. He called to Marybelle for hot water, and he had a sheet torn into strips and the strips boiled, and later he dressed the wound fresh. Cory watched him always in silence, his eyes hard and his lips drawn down. Cory looked infinitely younger than Marybelle; he looked older than time.

When Ives was finished, Cory glanced at his sister. "You've got a horse? We'll be getting out of here this morning."

Ives said, "You're going to stay where you are. At least today."

Cory said, "I know you're a doctor. And I know she must have fetched you here because there wasn't any other doctor. That doesn't change anything."

Ives said, "Nurse your grudge, if you like. But I say you're not going."

"And I say I am!" Marybelle came to the bunk. "You headstrong fool!" she said. "You'd have lost your arm, but for him. Now quit acting like you ought to be spanked!"

Ives expected Cory to answer her in kind; instead he sank into sullen silence; Ives didn't know which of the two was the older, but he knew now which was the dominant one.

Cory said grudgingly, "I guess I'm beholden to you, Ives. You'll be paid for what you did."

Ives said, "Have you got half a hundred dollar bill, Cory?"

Cory looked surprised. "I've never seen a hundred dollar bill in my life."

"Brule backed that play you made in town. He was across the street when you showed up with your two stubble-hopping friends. Afterwards Brule laid for me along the road. He had half of a hundred dollar bill in his pocket."

Cory seemed to turn this over in his mind. "You've got it figured wrong somewhere, Ives. Old Charley was running around town babbling that you were back. I'd heard that Carradine had some sort of stepon, a doctor named Ives. I thought I'd tell you to climb on the stage again. Brule wasn't in on it. If he was across the street, he was taking care of his own business."

Ives said, "Maybe it was him shot you."

"I wouldn't know," Cory said. Ives frowned thoughtfully. He stood in silence, looking down at Cory; he saw here a petulant youngster who'd had his pride hurt in Tamerlane and would be slow about forgetting that. But he saw, too, a potential ally, and he said then, "Look, Cory, do you really want trouble with Colonel Carradine?"

"I want my people left alone!"

"You wouldn't have helped them if you'd forced me onto the stage. I didn't come to back the colonel with another gun. I came to try to talk him out of his war. That puts us on the same side, doesn't it?"

Cory said, "You'll have to lay more than words on the line."

"Give me time," Ives said. He walked out of the shack; in the clearing, sunlight lay strong and heavy; now, and the woods around the place smelled dry in the daylight. He stood there, one foot upon a stump, his elbow propped upon his knee, his chin cupped in his hand. Marybelle came and stood behind him. She said, "Cory's not a bad kid. He just hasn't really grown up. His way is to kick down anything that stands in front of him."

Ives said, "Would you like to take a ride?"

"With you?"

"Along. One of us had better stay with Cory. It's your turn now. I'd like you to ride down to your place. Your father will want to know about Cory. And I want to know what's going on down there."

She said, "You're worried."

Ives nodded. "Remember those shots we heard after we rode out of town? That was Hammer trying to snatch me out of jail. The outfit wasn't back at sunup this morning. They may have ridden to the settlement."

"I'll find out about it," she said. "While you're there, you might ask about those sick children," Ives said. "But just ask. Don't get too close to them."

She gave him a sharp look. "Very well," she said.

Try, Stop Me

Here's a story that sounds as though it came straight from the headquarters of the Republican National Committee: It was a day late in 1980, when socialized medicine had become the law of the land. A man was seized with a violent cramp in his stomach and sought relief at the modern white structure erected for the purpose in his home town. Upon entering the building, he found himself in a hall with two doors. One was marked "male," the other "female." Naturally, he entered the door marked "male."

with two doors. One was marked "Over 21," the other "Under 21." Since he was 52, he entered the door marked "Over 21."

He found himself in a room with two doors. One was marked "Serious illness," the other "minor indisposition." Since he was doubled up with pain by this time, he staggered through the door marked "Serious illness."

He found himself in a room with two doors. One was marked "Democrats," the other "Republicans." Since he had voted a straight Republican ticket all his life, he entered the door marked "Republicans"—and found himself out on the street.

Today's women are taller than those of 50 years ago.

Os Myers told me about his wheat running about 20 bushels to the acre which seems to be about the average hereabouts this year. Some black rust and a little smut in scattered spots, but nothing serious yet. Corn never looked better from the roadway.

There goes Nat Lefko, who has taken over management of the Rothman store and is happy over business prospects. Doing a good job. And here comes Don Henkle, the five and dime man, who is just beginning to get back into stride after his vacation.

Started to the courthouse to visit the sheriff, but decided he probably could not hear me anyway over the noise of trucks with illegal mufflers, so did change to hunt for a councilman who was to be asked how much longer we have to put up with the blatant Pennsylvania railroad diesel horn. In some cities where there has been official recognition of the diesel horn nuisance the railroads have replaced them with chime whistles. Probably no quieter, but at least pleasant-er listening.

George E. Sokolsky's These Days

The United States has never been an aggressor. If anything, this country's weakness has been what the Freudians call an inferiority complex. We always have looked elsewhere for greater wisdom, greater knowledge, greater perfections. Some years ago, it was fashionable, in certain circles, to accept the Swedish modification of capitalism as so wonderful as to be worthy of our imitation. Yet, one had to ask: What has Sweden got that we do not have?

So, after the last war, our intellectuals became active to re-stimulate the culture of the dying nations of Europe. It was American enthusiasm and financing that produced UNESCO as a world-wide revival of the varying cultures of man that had suffered devastation of war. A UNESCO description of culture appears in an interesting study of the entire subject issued by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace:

"Into the making of a culture go many factors—climate, natural resources, language, tradition, education, commerce, government, etc. Geographical barriers may help one people to develop in peace through long periods of time; an exposed geographic position may tend to make a people warlike, either in their own defense or in conquest of their neighbors. Possession of metal and sources of power may lead one people to industry, while fertile soil leads another to agriculture, and good harbors on the sea may lead a third to commerce."

Then they say something that is more in the nature of the totalitarians:

"Good government and great leaders may provide one people with a heritage of order and justice, while tyrants and a different tradition in government lead another to internal antagonisms and political instability. Men of genius find varying forms of expression, and fulfill their genius variously in different periods and among different cultural contexts."

We do not, in this country, worry too much about men of genius. They come and go. In fact, very few who function in government fail to believe that each is at least a great leader and probably a genius. Few men who have sat in the White House have ever assumed that truly it is the whole people and not the individual in office that accomplishes all the wonders that we behold. The "great man" theory of life which gave us such bad dictators as Hitler and Mussolini, has also given us Stalin, who is worshipped in his own country and its satellites as the greatest genius that ever lived.

The other day, I visited Association Island in Lake Ontario to attend a camp of General Electric executives and what impressed me most was the total absence of the "great man" theory. Charles E. Wilson, the president of General Electric, was there, but so were about 300 others. And there was no rank of any kind. I could not help recalling how I have seen, in other countries, men rise when the top man entered a dining hall; how they practically stood at attention; how they bowed deferentially as they approached the genius. Americans take all that in their stride. The top man is just another specialized worker.

Injectons Found Helpful in Treating Hypertension Cases

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

HYPERTENSION, or high blood pressure, is one of the most pressing problems confronting medical science because of the large number of complications which may result from it, such as damage to the heart, blood vessels, and kidneys.

It would appear, according to an article written by Dr. James H. Hutten of Chicago, in the Medical Times, that, in some cases of high blood pressure, disturbances of the glands of internal secretion, namely, the endocrine glands, particularly the pituitary gland at the base of the brain and the adrenal gland located just above the kidney, may be a factor in the disorder.

Exact Method

Unfortunately, however, there does not as yet seem to be any exact method of telling in just which cases endocrine gland disturbances are a factor. Nevertheless, about 3 out of every 100 patients treated were helped by giving them injections of extracts from the pituitary gland and small doses of thyroid extract. The exact amount of thyroid extract to be used was determined by noting the patient's response to treatment.

The pituitary extract was given twice weekly by injection under the skin.

These patients were also put on a reducing diet, and all of them lost weight. However, it was not believed that the relief of symptoms and reduction in blood pressure came from the weight loss. After treatment was stopped, there was a slow gain in weight, but the blood pressure rose much more slowly.

In these patients it was thought that the high blood pressure was due to improper action of the pituitary and the adrenal glands.

Therefore, they were all treated by giving them small doses of X-ray over these gland regions. About three to seven days after the first treatment, if the patient's symptoms improved and there was a marked drop in blood pressure, no further treatment was given until the blood pressure again began to rise.

First Treatment

If the blood pressure did not drop and the symptoms improved after the first treatment, additional treatments, up to six, were given at weekly intervals, unless a drop in the blood pressure and improvements in the symptoms occurred sooner.

The effect of the treatment lasts for a variable period of time in different patients. If, after an interval of time, the blood pressure should again rise, further treatments may be again administered. In more than 200 patients who had three or more such courses of treatment, symptoms were relieved and blood pressure reduced.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. V.: I am thirty-five years old. For the past year I have noticed bruise marks appear on my legs. What is the cause and is it dangerous?

Answer: It is possible that you have what is known as purpura. In this condition, the patient has bleeding into the skin which is shown by spots that vary in size from a pinhead to that of a coin. In some cases the cause cannot be found. The condition may be serious.

You should have a careful examination by your physician, including a complete examination of the blood so that the clotting time, bleeding time and the blood platelets, which help in clotting of the blood, may be determined.

"The Authority on Authorities"

VARYING YOUR SIGNALS

PRACTICALLY every bridge player—surely every one appreciably past the beginner stage—knows the difference between an "encouraging" and a "discouraging" card played to an opening lead from across the table. The former is any card readable as probably higher than the player's lowest, and the latter is one which looks to the leader like the lowest. So, if you want a second lead of the same suit, but not a third, while holding four cards, you should play the second or third card of the suit first and then, on the second lead, put the next higher card.

East managed to read, from the fact that South made that jump bid of two levels more than necessary, that the declarer almost surely had nothing but a considerable heart suit. Such being the case, West was marked for any unseen high-card strength. Since West, however, had passed on his first turn instead of opening the bidding, he most likely had only a four-card diamond suit. That being the case, East counted South for two diamonds.

So far, so good. But then East, desiring that his side score two diamond tricks, used the 3 for an encouraging card. Still all right. But, when West obeyed by leading the A to the second trick, East carefully put on the 4. That was a costly error. West thereupon did the only thing he could after seeing the high-low, led a third diamond. South ruffed, cleared trumps in two rounds and on the clubs discarded his spades to make the contract plus an extra trick.

The 8 on the first trick was all right, but East should have played the 10 on the second. The low-high would have been virtually an irrevocable order to switch. The barest glance at the dummy would have called for a spade lead, which would have produced three tricks in the suit and beaten the contract two.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

THE TWO of them sat down at the table, and Marybelle passed food to Ives, and she smiled at him then, her smile roguish. She said, "Wouldn't you like it this way every morning?"

He frowned. "I don't want to keep coming to table wearing a gun."

She nodded. "I see what you mean. We talked that out last night, didn't we?" She ate in silence, and after she'd poured coffee she said, "Did you have trouble at Hammer?"

"No one was there but Tana. She fixed the sack for us."

Marybelle pursed her lips. "She knows about Cory being up here? And me?"

Ives nodded. "That was foolish, Doc." Marybelle said, a trace of anger in her voice. "We'll have Hammer upon us before the day's over."

"You don't know Tana."

"I know women," she countered. "You think a secret's safe with her because you think you've made an appeal to her sentiments. It's you men who are the sentimental ones. A woman will weigh any knowledge for exactly what it's worth. Your Tana's Colonel Carradine's granddaughter, isn't she? She'll see that this chance is too good for the colonel to pass up."

Ives felt the heat grow in him. "Do you think she wants Cory's blood on her hands?"

Marybelle made a face. "She'll talk herself out of that. She'll have herself believing it's for the best. A woman can turn back into white faster than any man could think of doing it."

He put down his coffee cup. "Look," he said, "we've got grub, and we've new dressing for Cory's arm. And we can thank Tana for it!"

"Doc," Marybelle said, "we're quarreling."

She came around the table and stood by him. She lifted a hand to his forehead and brushed away a lock of his hair. She said, "Maybe you're right. I hope you are. She means something to you, doesn't she?"

He said, "I was raised on Hammer."

Cory Lund said, "What is this?"

His eyes were open; his voice was sneering. He lay there in the bunk looking wrong out.

Ives nodded toward him. "Better feed him."

Marybelle moved to prepare a plate. She took it to Cory and lifted a spoon, and Cory said, "Hey, I've got one wing." He propped himself up on his right elbow, but then he couldn't use the spoon. "Better let me do it," Marybelle said. Her voice was starchy; her voice dominated Cory. He allowed himself to be fed.

Afterwards Ives moved to him. "Let's have a look at that arm."

He kept his thoughts to himself as he examined the wound. It was doing as well as he'd hoped, but some part of his judgment he reserved even from himself. He called to Marybelle for hot water, and he had a sheet torn into strips and the strips boiled, and later he dressed the wound fresh. Cory watched him always in silence, his eyes hard and his lips drawn down. Cory looked infinitely younger than Marybelle; he looked older than time.

When Ives was finished, Cory glanced at his sister. "You've got a horse? We'll be getting out of here this morning."

Ives said, "You're going to stay where you are. At least today."

Cory said, "I know you're a doctor. And I know she must have fetched you here because there wasn't any other doctor. That doesn't change anything."

Ives said, "Nurse your grudge, if you like. But I say you're not going."

"And I say I am!"

Marybelle came to the bunk. "You headstrong fool!" she said. "You'd have lost your arm, but for him. Now quit acting like you ought to be spanked!"

Ives expected Cory to answer her in kind; instead he sank into sullen silence; Ives didn't know which of the two was the older, but he knew now which was the dominant one.

Cory said grudgingly, "I guess I'm beholden to you, Ives. You'll be paid for what you did."

Ives said, "Have you got half a hundred dollar bill, Cory?"

Cory looked surprised. "I've never seen a hundred dollar bill in my life."

"Brule backed that play you made in town. He was across the street when you showed up with your two stubble-hopping friends. Afterwards Brule laid for me along the road. He had half of a hundred dollar bill in his pocket."

Cory seemed to turn this over in his mind. "You've got it figured wrong somewhere, Ives. Old Charley was running around town."

babbling that you were back. I'd heard that Carradine had some sort of stepson, a doctor named Ives. I thought I'd tell you to climb on the stage again. Brule wasn't in on it. If he was across the street, he was taking care of his own business."

Ives said, "Maybe it was him shot you."

"I wouldn't know," Cory said. Ives frowned thoughtfully. He stood in silence, looking down at Cory; he saw here a petulant youngster who'd had his pride hurt in Tamerlane and would be slow about forgetting that. But he saw, too, a potential ally, and he said then: "Look, Cory, do you really want trouble with Colonel Carradine?"

"I want my people left alone!"

"You wouldn't have helped them if you'd forced me onto the stage. I didn't come to back the colonel with another gun. I came to try to talk him out of his war. That puts us on the same side, doesn't it?"

Cory said, "You'll have to lay more than words on the line."

"Give me time," Ives said. He walked out of the shack; in the clearing, sunlight lay strong and heavy now, and the woods around the place smelled dry in the daylight. He stood there, one foot upon a stump, his elbow propped upon his knee, his chin cupped in his hand. Marybelle came and stood behind him. She said, "Cory's not a bad kid. He just hasn't really grown up. His way is to kick down anything that stands in front of him."

Ives said, "Would you like to take a ride?"

"With you?"

"Alone. One of us had better stay with Cory. It's your turn now. I'd like you to ride down to your place. Your father will want to know about Cory. And I want to know what's going on down there."

She said, "You're worried."

Ives nodded. "Remember those shots we heard after we rode out of town? That was Hammer trying to snatch me out of jail. The outfit wasn't back at sunup this morning. They may have ridden to the settlement."

"I'll find out about it," she said. "While you're there, you might ask about those sick children," Ives said. "But just ask. Don't get too close to them."

She gave him a sharp look. "Very well," she said.

Mrs. Beryl Stevenson of Circleville Route 2 served as judge. Entries were either box or tray lunches suitable for school use.

Miss Silbaugh's winning entry was a tray lunch which included a tuna fish salad served on lettuce with olives and pickles; three kinds of sandwiches—jelly on white bread, cheese and pimento on cracked wheat bread and cottage cheese on Hollywood bread—a pineapple milkshake and iced cookie.

Winners of first three places were awarded medals. Miss Silbaugh said she was "awfully thrilled" to have won first place in the revue.

Evelyn Wright was second place winner. She represented New Holland Future Homemakers 4-H Club.

Ann Short won third prize and Sara Short fourth. Both belong to Jackson Triple S 4-H Club.

Elaine Quillen of Walnut Sew and Sew was fifth place winner.

Other winners were Anna Briggs of New Holland Future Homemakers 4-H Club, sixth; Martha Hughes, seventh, also of New Holland Future Homemakers; Miriam Ward, eighth, Donna Mae Hudson, ninth and Gertrude Hudson, tenth, all of Scioto Hardy Workers.

According to Miss Genevieve Alley, home demonstration agent for Pickaway County, interest in food clubs is increasing throughout the county. In 1949 there were 15 food projects listed. This year there were almost 100. There are now five 4-H Clubs devoted to food preparation.

Future Homemakers of New Holland is directed by Mrs. Harold Wright and Mrs. Harold Ankrom. In charge of Duvall Busy Fingers is Mrs. Leo Zwyer. Jackson Triple S has for its leaders, Mrs. Forrest Short and Mrs. Ralph Roby Jr. Mrs. Treat Keller is leader for Scioto Hardy Workers and Mrs. Franklin Riddle is in charge of Darby Three S.

She reported that Bloomfield Busy Bodies included food preservation and clothing projects in their Summer work.

The church kitchen where this club meets was equipped with a pressure cooker. Club girls had canned carrots, beets, cabbage, jams, jellies, black berries and raspberries. They had also prepared for freezing many of the same fruits and vegetables.

Linda Silbaugh Awarded Top Prize In 4-H Club Food Revue Saturday

15 Entries Are Judged

At the final food revue of 4-H Clubs held Saturday morning in common pleas court room of Pickaway Courthouse, Linda Silbaugh won first place. Fifteen entries were displayed. Miss Silbaugh is a member of Walnut Sew and Sew 4-H Club.

Mrs. Beryl Stevenson of Circleville Route 2 served as judge. Entries were either box or tray lunches suitable for school use.

Miss Silbaugh's winning entry was a tray lunch which included a tuna fish salad served on lettuce with olives and pickles; three kinds of sandwiches—jelly on white bread, cheese and pimento on cracked wheat bread and cottage cheese on Hollywood bread—a pineapple milkshake and iced cookie.

Winners of first three places were awarded medals. Miss Silbaugh said she was "awfully thrilled" to have won first place in the revue.

Evelyn Wright was second place winner. She represented New Holland Future Homemakers 4-H Club.

Ann Short won third prize and Sara Short fourth. Both belong to Jackson Triple S 4-H Club.

Elaine Quillen of Walnut Sew and Sew was fifth place winner.

Other winners were Anna Briggs of New Holland Future Homemakers 4-H Club, sixth; Martha Hughes, seventh, also of New Holland Future Homemakers; Miriam Ward, eighth, Donna Mae Hudson, ninth and Genrose Hudson, tenth, all of Scioto Hardy Workers.

According to Miss Genevieve Alley, home demonstration agent for Pickaway County, interest in food clubs is increasing throughout the county. In 1949 there were 15 food projects listed. This year there were almost 100. There are now five 4-H Clubs devoted to food preparation.

Future Homemakers of New Holland is directed by Mrs. Harold Wright and Mrs. Harold Ankrom. In charge of Duval Busy Fingers is Mrs. Leo Zwyer. Jackson Triple S has for its leaders Mrs. Forrest Short and Mrs. Ralph Roby Jr. Mrs. Treat Keller is leader for Scioto Hardy Workers and Mrs. Franklin Riddle is in charge of Darby Three S.

Miss Alley said several clubs combined food and clothing work this year. Older girls in Walnut Sew and Sew 4-H Club each had both a food and clothing project.

She reported that Bloomfield Busy Bodies included food preservation and clothing projects in their Summer work.

The church kitchen where this club meets was equipped with a pressure cooker. Club girls had canned carrots, beets, cabbage, jams, jellies, black berries and raspberries. They had also prepared for freezing many of the same fruits and vegetables.

AGENCY PREPARES PLAN

U.S. Not At All Ready For A Possible A-Attack

Editor's Note: The Communist invasion of South Korea has created new fears of a third world war in which the United States may be the target of enemy action. The question arises: Is the home front prepared for such an assault. Following is the first of a series of three articles on the status of American civil defense.

WASHINGTON, July 17 — An atom-bomb attack on the United States tomorrow would catch the nation with its guard down on civil defense.

By way of contrast, Russia has a long-established civil defense organization numbering more than 20 million participants and a program of training five million new "volunteers" annually.

The USSR 20 years ago started dispersing its industry while much of the U. S. war production might is concentrated in a few major cities.

American officials are acutely aware of this disparity. In light of the uneasy world picture, they have accelerated U. S. planning to the fullest degree. But it will take time to obtain results; two years at least.

IT IS DOUBTFUL the nation will have anything like an effective, national civil defense force before 1952 and the home front will not be completely prepared for an atomic war before 1953.

Civilian Mobilization Director Paul J. Larsen told Congress last Spring:

"There is one question which I am sure must be in your minds. What would we do if bombs should fall tomorrow? Would we be ready? "To be frank, the answer is that we would not be ready tomorrow—not as ready as we will be a year from now, but more nearly ready than a year ago."

Today, three and one-half months later and three weeks after the outbreak of fighting in Korea, Larsen finds no reason to change that appraisal of the situation.

The answer as to why we are unready is not difficult. In the years immediately following V-J Day, nobody really faced up to the problem of civil defense. Federal planning was irregular; leadership changed frequently, and reports were made and pigeon-holed.

President Truman's dramatic announcement last September of an atomic explosion in Russia finally put steam into the U. S. civil defense drive. Much time had been wasted, however, and no one knows for certain how much is left.

One military estimate is that by mid-1952, Russia will have a sufficient stockpile of A-bombs to do great damage in an attack on the U. S.

Larsen, 48-year-old electronics engineer and former official of New Mexico atomic laboratories, took over the civilian defense mobilization effort last January. He has the operation moving rapidly and huge amounts of planning are going on.

In the musty old State Department Building adjacent to the White House, Larsen's small staff of 27—drawing on the talents and ideas of 700 specialists in other federal agencies—is whipping into shape an interim or "emergency" civil defense chart.

IT WILL BE ready Sept. 1 for transmission to the governors of all states, territories and possessions. This will constitute the nation's civil defense blueprint while the master program is being built, volunteers trained, equipment standardized and materials stockpiled.

If one of our cities were attacked tomorrow, however, it would have to rely on its own existing fire and police departments and medical resources, augmented by available military forces and some technical assistance from the federal government.

Larsen and his aides are constructing no huge federal bureaucracy. They have a "grass roots" concept of civil defense. Washington can draft blueprints, provide technical data on the atom, stockpile equipment and possibly help finance the program.

But there federal responsibility largely ends. The states, and more particularly each individual city, will have to enroll and train volunteers and prepare itself to cope with an emergency of the type which bomb-blasted Hiroshima suffered some five years ago.

After Sept. 1, states and cities will be in a position to step up their civil defense preparations. Thus far, however, only 22 states and Hawaii have enacted legislation to permit implementation of the forthcoming civil defense guide. This, despite Larsen's grim warning:

"There is no city or town in the nation that can claim absolute immunity from wartime disaster at the hands of an enemy."

Next—America's "guinea pig cities" in the civilian defense plan.

Slash In Pay Brings Strike

PORTSMOUTH, July 17 — A strike of Portsmouth's bus drivers and garagemen today forced residents to depend upon taxis, private cars and hitchhiking for transportation.

The strike went into effect yesterday. The strike of the 43 bus drivers and 11 garagemen idled 25 buses which carry passengers in the city and to nearby West Portsmouth, New Boston, North Moreland and Sciotoville.

All members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coaches Employees of America, the strikers walked off their jobs in protest of a pay cut of ten cents an hour.

Truman Veto, FEPC Word Battle Seen In Proposed Anti-Red Bill

WASHINGTON, July 17 — A Senate Democratic chief predicted today that President Truman will veto the Mundt-Ferguson anti-Communist bill if Congress approves the measure.

Senate Majority Leader Lucas, (D) Ill., made the forecast and stated at the same time that one of the obstacles to passage probably will be a civil rights fight.

Lucas said Sen. Langer, (R) N. D., who voted against the bill in committee, will try to tack a civil rights amendment to the legislation if it is called up for debate.

Among other things, the bill would require registration with the Justice Department of all Communist and Communist front organization, together with financial statements and names of individual members.

A determined bipartisan effort is shaping up to push the bill through. But Lucas said the Senate leadership is dead-set against calling up the measure by Sens. Ferguson, (R) Mich.,

and Mundt, (R) S. D., and Johnston, (D) S. C.

Lucas explained:

"IT IS TOO controversial. We are trying to clear our work for adjournment or recess. We can't get into something like that now."

Questioned about the administration attitude on the measure, Lucas replied:

"In my opinion, the President will veto the bill if it passes Congress."

Lucas said that Langer has told him he will propose a Fair Employment Practices Commission amendment to the bill if it is called up.

This could be expected to start a civil rights fight that might doom whatever chances the bill might have.

Sen. Eastland, (D) Miss., chairman of the judiciary subcommittee which considered the measure, has asserted that he will move for a showdown if Lucas gives the green light to other legislation.

If Eastland moves to call up the Mundt-Ferguson bill it will precipitate a pitched battle on the floor. A majority vote would be needed to make it the order of business. If proponents win that one, they probably can force Senate approval and send the bill to the House where passage is almost certain.

Sugar Shortage Fears Scoffed

NEW YORK, July 17—There is no sugar shortage.

A sugar broker service, Lamborn and Co., announced in New York today that housewives who are "hysterically" draining the nation's sugar bins are wasting their efforts.

The service said: "There are mountains of sugar immediately available, and in only a short space of time more mountains of sugar will be produced."

If sugar appears to be scarce in some places, the service said, it is because housewives on a mad hoarding spree are trying to buy in a few days a supply sufficient to last them one, two, six or 12 months.

Despite the huge supply now available, it added that it is "not physically possible to meet these inordinate demands."

New VA Payout Program Set Up

WASHINGTON, July 17—President Truman has signed into law a bill designed to make funds due Veterans Administration patients available to them within hours instead of weeks.

At present, each regional VA office must forward to the Treasury in Washington all personal funds of patients and funds due incompetent beneficiaries.

The bill allows the funds to be handled entirely at the regional VA level, thus speeding up the process to a matter of hours and reducing the cost of handling such funds.

Korean Aides Are Overworked

WASHINGTON, July 17 — If a vote were taken today on the most overworked group in Washington it probably would go to the staff of the Korean embassy.

Ambassador John M. Chung puts it this way: "There have been no Saturdays or Sundays for us since the invasion began."

But there federal responsibility largely ends. The states, and more particularly each individual city, will have to enroll and train volunteers and prepare itself to cope with an emergency of the type which bomb-blasted Hiroshima suffered some five years ago.

After Sept. 1, states and cities will be in a position to step up their civil defense preparations. Thus far, however, only 22 states and Hawaii have enacted legislation to permit implementation of the forthcoming civil defense guide. This, despite Larsen's grim warning:

"There is no city or town in the nation that can claim absolute immunity from wartime disaster at the hands of an enemy."

Next—America's "guinea pig cities" in the civilian defense plan.

Slash In Pay Brings Strike

PORTSMOUTH, July 17 — A strike of Portsmouth's bus drivers and garagemen today forced residents to depend upon taxis, private cars and hitchhiking for transportation.

The strike went into effect yesterday. The strike of the 43 bus drivers and 11 garagemen idled 25 buses which carry passengers in the city and to nearby West Portsmouth, New Boston, North Moreland and Sciotoville.

All members of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coaches Employees of America, the strikers walked off their jobs in protest of a pay cut of ten cents an hour.

The Cunard liner was towed by six tugs to the Lauzon shipyard yesterday after she was pulled off a ledge of the Island of Orleans.

A preliminary investigation disclosed that the rocks had pierced the outer shell of the luxury liner and penetrated ballast tanks. Nineteen feet of water entered the first hold.

Truman Veto, FEPC Word Battle Seen In Proposed Anti-Red Bill

WASHINGTON, July 17 — A Senate Democratic chief predicted today that President Truman will veto the Mundt-Ferguson anti-Communist bill if Congress approves the measure.

Senate Majority Leader Lucas, (D) Ill., made the forecast and stated at the same time that one of the obstacles to passage probably will be a civil rights fight.

Lucas said Sen. Langer, (R) N. D., who voted against the bill in committee, will try to tack a civil rights amendment to the legislation if it is called up for debate.

Among other things, the bill would require registration with the Justice Department of all Communist and Communist-front organizations, together with financial statements and names of individual members.

A determined bipartisan effort is shaping up to push the bill through. But Lucas said the Senate leadership is dead-set against calling up the measure by Sens. Ferguson, (R) Mich.,

and Mundt, (R) S. D., and Johnston, (D) S. C.

Lucas explained:

"IT IS TOO controversial. We are trying to clear our work for adjournment or recess. We can't get into something like that now."

Questioned about the administration attitude on the measure, Lucas replied:

"In my opinion, the President will veto the bill if it passes Congress."

Lucas said that Langer has told him he will propose a Fair Employment Practices Commission amendment to the bill if it is called up.

This could be expected to start a civil rights fight that might doom whatever chances the bill might have.

Sen. Eastland, (D) Miss., chairman of the judiciary subcommittee which considered the measure, has asserted that he will move for a showdown if Lucas gives the green light to other legislation.

If Eastland moves to call up the Mundt-Ferguson bill it will precipitate a pitched battle on the floor. A majority vote would be needed to make it the order of business. If proponents win that one, they probably can force Senate approval and send the bill to the House where passage is almost certain.

2-YEAR TOUR SCHEDULED Renaissance Of Italy Art To Be Displayed In U.S.

NEW YORK, July 17—The American people late in 1950 will get their first glimpse of the tremendous renaissance in Italian arts and handicrafts since World War II.

A great exhibition of contemporary Italian decorative and industrial arts, selected by four American experts at the request of both the United States and Italy, will open in Brooklyn Museum Nov. 22 and after next Feb. 1 will begin a two-year tour of other American cities.

More than 2500 articles, ranging from an altar of glass mosaics to plastic Christmas tree ornaments, have been selected for American display by Charles Nagel, architect and director of Brooklyn Museum; Walter Dorwin Teague, famous industrial designer; and Meyric R. Rogers of the Chicago Art Institute, who recently spent two months in Italy arranging for the exhibition.

The trio, under the aegis of ECA and in conjunction with Remy Alexander, an American employed by Italy's Compagnia Nazionale Artigiana, ransacked Italy for its modern treasures.

Both Nagel and Teague paused long enough yesterday in their plans for the exhibition to say that not only were they amazed by the extent of the artistic renaissance in Italy but equally impressed by its contemporary or modern approach, its freshness, strength and infinite variety.

BOTH MEN CREDIT the resurgence of artistic genius in

REA Is Proud Of Progress In New Hookups

WASHINGTON, July 17—The Rural Electrification Administration says that introduction of electric power to farming areas has moved at a constantly speeded-up pace through 1948 and 1949.

REA reports that during the business year ended June 30, more than 485,000 rural families and businesses hooked up to power lines for the first time.

Fiscal year 1950 set a new record in miles of power distribution lines energized with a total of 185,000 miles.

REA says, however, the fact that longer lines were strung to connect fewer people shows that rural electrification is moving into sparsely settled areas.

In 1949, an average of about three new connections were made for each mile of new line. The 1950 figures show an average of only about two and one-half new connections for each mile of line.

REA reports that rural use of power continues to skyrocket. Electricity distributed on REA-financed lines reached new records both in total quantity and in average use per farm.

The government agency is proud of the record of loan repayment. A major share of loans are paid ahead of schedule, and less than one-half of one percent of loan repayments are 30 days or more behind.

Garbage Scow Duty Seen For Visiting Cadets

WEST POINT, July 17—Fifty-two West Point third classmen who will join the Navy temporarily Friday may start their maritime training with a "short tour on a garbage scow."

This would be in revenge for the reception given 64 Annapolis cadets who had volunteered for two weeks of Army training with West Point cadets at the military academy's Camp Buckner.

The Army welcoming committee took the midshipmen to the wrong camp, an abandoned prisoner of war inclosure. The Annapolis men were told that the run-down, barbed-wire-inclosed buildings weren't good enough for the Army, but were "just right" for the Navy. Then the Middies were told to prepare for an immediate hike through the swamps.

Just as the Navy men's grumbles reached a roar, the cadets

If termites are present you will be SHOWN and a fair price quoted for a treatment which is guaranteed for TEN YEARS.

Many irresponsible amateurs—self-styled "exterminators" and "pest" time—entomologists offer fantastic "guarantees" and bargain prices, but you owe it to yourself to be SURE you are securing the services of a thoroughly reliable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company whose guarantee really has a meaning.

An effective termite treatment must not only eliminate the termites now present in the structure, but also prevent the countless thousands of others, who live in the GROUND outside the house, from returning.

The almost unbelievable cunning of the termite makes the successful treatment of your property a job for those who have the proper equipment and the KNOW HOW. Further, because of the termites tenacity and persistence it is sometimes impossible to completely exterminate them with ONE treatment.

Therefore it is vital that the company doing the job be AVAILABLE later to return, if necessary. Unless you are SURE of this fact you may find yourself with a "Guarantee" but no one STILL IN BUSINESS to MAKE GOOD.

Always remember—a guarantee is only as good as the man who gives it.

We are local representatives of a reputable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company who are ACCREDITED MEMBERS OF THE OHIO PEST CONTROL ASSOCIATION.

TERMITES

Cause damage in excess of fifty million dollars annually for REPAIRS alone. These destructive pests work in secret and may be destroying your property NOW. Have it inspected by an expert and be sure. There is no charge for the inspection, and if your property is not infested they will tell you so. If termites are present you will be SHOWN and a fair price quoted for a treatment which is guaranteed for TEN YEARS.

Many irresponsible amateurs—self-styled "exterminators"—and "part time" entomologists offer fantastic "guarantees" and bargain prices, but you owe it to yourself to be SURE you are securing the services of a thoroughly reliable and FINANCIALLY RESPONSIBLE company whose guarantee really has a meaning.

An effective termite treatment must not only eliminate the termites now present in the structure, but also prevent the countless thousands of others, who live in the GROUND outside the house, from reinfesting.

The almost unbelievable cunning of the termites makes the successful treatment of your property a job for those who have the proper equipment and the KNOW HOW. Further, because of the termites tenacity and persistence it is sometimes impossible to completely exterminate them with ONE treatment.

Therefore it is vital that the company doing the job be AVAILABLE later to return, if necessary. Unless you are SURE of this fact you may find yourself with a "Guarantee" but no one STILL IN BUSINESS to MAKE GOOD.

Always remember—a guarantee is only as good as the man who gives it.

Basketball Problems Unsolved

Coaches To Study Plans Further

COLUMBUS, July 17 — Ohio scholastic basketball's two major problems—the age-eligibility and redistricting questions—remain unsolved today and probably will be for some time to come.

The Ohio High School Athletic Association board of control took up both those matters in a meeting which ended Saturday in Cedar Point. Both were set aside for further study.

Representatives Paul Walker of Midtown and Ralph Webster of Columbus represented a proposal that any player who will reach his 20th birthday during a season of sports activity be ineligible for the entire season.

That would forestall the loss of a key player during a crucial part of a season, or, even worse, during tournament competition. The board voted to present a referendum on the matter to the association's 1130 member schools.

WEBSTER and Walker consulted with several board members, however, and decided they weren't satisfied with the wording of their proposal. They asked that the board table the matter until its fall meeting.

The redistricting plan, which would divide the state into eight districts, was taken under advisement by the board. Webster, Walker and Wilbur Burke of Smithville will meet with High School Commissioner H. W. Emswiler to discuss the matter here July 29.

In other action, the high school moguls set up a committee to work on uniformity of basketball tournament arrangements, reelected John B. Flood of Akron president of the Ohio Athletic Injury Mutual Association, and adopted a new set of rules designed to regulate junior high school membership in the association.

Basketball Problems Unsolved

Coaches To Study Plans Further

COLUMBUS, July 17 — Ohio scholastic basketball's two major problems—the age-eligibility and redistricting questions—remain unsolved today and probably will be for some time to come.

The Ohio High School Athletic Association board of control took up both those matters in a meeting which ended Saturday in Cedar Point. Both were set aside for further study.

Representatives Paul Walker of Midtown and Ralph Webster of Columbus represented a proposal that any player who will reach his 20th birthday during a season of sports activity be ineligible for the entire season.

That would forestall the loss of a key player during a crucial part of a season, or, even worse, during tournament competition. The board voted to present a referendum on the matter to the association's 1130 member schools.

WEBSTER and Walker consulted with several board members, however, and decided they weren't satisfied with the wording of their proposal. They asked that the board table the matter until its fall meeting.

The redistricting plan, which would divide the state into eight districts, was taken under advisement by the board. Webster, Walker and Wilbur Burkley of Smithville will meet with High School Commissioner H. W. Emswiler to discuss the matter here July 29.

In other action, the high school moguls set up a committee to work on uniformity of basketball tournament arrangements, reelected John B. Flood of Akron president of the Ohio Athletic Injury Mutual Association, and adopted a new set of rules designed to regulate junior high school membership in the association.

Legion Juniors Take 9-4 Loss In Columbus

Circleville junior American Legion baseball team suffered a 9-4 defeat at the hands of Southway Post juniors Sunday in Columbus.

The local junior hardballers tallied only four runs on 10 hits and six Southway fumbles during the tilt, while Southway scored its nine runs on nine hits and five Circleville bobbles.

Sunday's loss was the fifth in eight starts for the local junior team.

The juniors are to play host to Hillsboro Legion juniors at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday in Ted Lewis Park, following through with a contest at 5:30 p. m. Thursday against the Southway Post again.

Line score of Sunday's loss follows:

Longest rap of the contest was a four-base clout from the bat of Lloyd Minor.

Next contest on tap for the local club will be a twin bill against Newark Thursday in Bremen. Line score of Sunday's victory follows:

Hog Cholera Still Considered To Be Mystery Disease

Best Says Whole Story Not Known

Spreading Methods Is Big Question

Accusing fingers have been pointed at everything from buzzards to wagon wheels as spreaders of hog cholera. Larry A. Best, Pickaway County agricultural agent said Monday, but he added:

"Nobody yet knows the whole story of how this tricky and deadly disease travels around."

Latest expert to advance an opinion, Best said, is Dr. A. H. Quin of Kansas City. In the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association, the doctor said that more than 70 years of study has "brought to light many important facts about hog cholera and that the means by which this disease could be eradicated are now known."

But investigators who have attempted to trace its spread from one place to another have often ended up in a dizzy whirl, he said.

IT WAS ONCE thought that farm pigeons had a lot to do with spreading it, Dr. Quin said, but controlled experiments have disproved that belief.

He explained that the hog cholera virus can live in unburied carcasses for months during cold weather but that it is destroyed in a matter of hours or days in decomposing carcasses during hot weather.

There is evidence that flies, crows, buzzards, roving dogs, the hoofs of horses, wagon wheels, trucks, and even the shoes of people may carry the virus from infected to clean premises.

But it is often difficult if not impossible to prove that any one of these was the cause of a given outbreak.

Commenting on the future of hog cholera control, Dr. Quin pointed to the unskilled use of the serum-and-virus method of immunizing swine against this disease.

The virus that goes into the product is a living organism that can actually spread the disease when carelessly handled. In spite of this danger, 33 barrels of it, amounting to millions of doses, are sold to untrained laymen every year, he said.

I cannot envisage where such unrestricted sale of fully virulent virus can possibly fit into a sensible long-range plan of control and eradication," he declared.

Rubber Workers Back On Jobs

AKRON, July 17—Workers at the B. F. Goodrich Tire Co. here returned to their jobs early today.

The first of nearly 4,000 employees idled by the seven-day strike returned to work after more than 1,000 members of the CIO-United Rubber Workers of America voted at a special meeting.

The unauthorized walkout started last Monday when the tire builders protested that three men were producing more than their quota.

Solon Lashes Lack Of Action In Home Defense

WASHINGTON, July 17—The government was accused today of planning its civilian defense program in "a business-as-usual" manner despite developments in Korea.

Rep. Kennedy, (D) Mass., declared that "there is still too much talk and too little action" in organizing civilian defenses in event of a sudden attack on American cities.

Kennedy commented that "if American civilians are not to be as unarmed with civil defense instructions as our troops in Korea were with military weapons, the time for action is now."

Kennedy has been a sharp critic of administration policy in preparing an overall blueprint for civilian protection against attack.

Civilian defense planning is under the direction of the National Security Resources Board headed by Stuart Symington.

The legislator complained that there has been "inexcusable delay" in federal planning to help city and state governments set up adequate precautionary measures.

Kennedy remarked: "One of the chief causes of concern to all Americans today must be the inadequate state of this nation's program for civil defense against a surprise atomic attack."

Influential Yanks And Exiles Join In New 'Voice Of Freedom'

NEW YORK, July 17—Influential American citizens and exiled democratic leaders of Eastern Europe have joined in broadcasting a "Voice Of Freedom" to 80 million enslaved people in the Iron Curtain countries.

Messages of hope, of courage and containing hard-hitting factual information are being beamed daily to the Soviet satellite countries by Radio Free Europe, owned and operated by the National Committee for a Free Europe, Inc., a group of private American citizens.

A full programming schedule was launched today with special broadcasts to Czechoslovakians and Romanians.

Today's programs followed a ten-day series of "audience building" broadcasts of six hours daily from Radio Free Europe's transmitter in Germany. Soon the programs are to be stepped up to around-the-clock schedules.

Designed to fight Communism, the programs are recorded in New York and the tapes flown to Europe for broadcasting.

THE VOICES are of exiled European leaders, speaking in their own native languages, and telling the story of Democracy and the struggle to restore freedom to the prisoner states.

In the New York headquarters of the committee, Robert Lang, director of Radio Free Europe, said that the committee plans to buy 200 more short wave transmitters and at least one medium wave transmitter. The project will involve heavy expenditures and will call for a large staff.

Lang explained how Radio Free Europe differed from the official "Voice of America," the government-sponsored broadcasts.

"Voice of America is strictly American government and therefore is limited by policy considerations," Lang said.

"Radio Free Europe is privately owned. We can do things that Voice cannot do. We can afford to be bolder, harder hitting."

"For example," Lang continued, the "Voice" for reasons of its own, dictated by government policy, has not named the Russians as aggressors. When Radio Free Europe discusses Korea we undoubtedly will brand the Russians as the instigators, the aggressors. Therein lies the big difference."

It is estimated that the average investment made by American business to put one man to work and keep him working is about $8,000.
